ABSTRACT

Based on previous studies from 1947 to 2023, an updated checklist of the family Vespidae (Insecta: Hymenoptera) from Azad Kashmir and Gilgit-Baltistan has been compiled. This updated checklist comprises 39 species representing 16 genera and three subfamilies. Azad Kashmir represents 26 species in 10 genera, while Gilgit-Baltistan harbors 24 species in 11 genera among three subfamilies. Among these, 11 species are found in both regions. Additionally, Eumenes coronatus coronatus (Panzer, 1799) is only known in Azad Kashmir, whereas Euodynerus fastidiosus fastidiosus (de Saussure, 1853), Euodynerus semisaecularis semisaecularis (Dalla Torre, 1889), Jucancistrocerus tachkensis (Dalla Torre, 1889), Oreumenoïdes edwardsi (de Saussure, 1852), Symmorphus crassicornis (Panzer, 1798), Symmorphus glasunowi Morawitz, 1895, Polistes associus Kohl, 1898, and Dolichovespula intermedia (Birula, 1930) are only known from Gilgit-Baltistan. Furthermore, the following four species are widely distributed throughout the country: Delta dimidiatipenne (de Saussure, 1852), Polistes wattii Cameron, 1900, Polistes olivaceus (DeGeer, 1773), and Vespa orientalis Linnaeus, 1771.

Keywords: Hornets and yellow jackets, paper wasps, potter wasps, northern Pakistan, regional distribution.

INTRODUCTION

Wasps, belonging to the order Hymenoptera, are a fascinating and diverse group of insects that have captured the curiosity of scientists and nature enthusiasts alike. They are members of the largest family, Vespidae, belonging to the superfamily Vespoidea (Goulet & Huber, 1993). This family is distributed worldwide and comprises more than 5000 described species and 250 genera under six subfamilies: Eumeninae, Euparagiinae, Masarinae, Polistinae, Stenogastrinae and Vespinae (Carpenter, 1981; Pickett & Carpenter, 2010; Gawas, Kumar, Pannure, Gupta, & Carpenter, 2020). Vespidae exhibits a wide distribution range spanning from tropical Africa and Australia, through Asia and temperate Eurasia, extending northward to Central South America (van der Vecht, 1966). The distribution of social wasps is primarily tropical, with a notable richness in species (Ebrahimi & Carpenter, 2008). Boasting high diversity at higher taxonomic levels, South-East Asia, emerges as a significant region for social wasps (Carpenter & Nguyen, 2013). Despite their often-fearsome reputation due to their ability to sting, wasps play critical roles in ecosystems as predators, pollinators, and agents of biological control. Their intricate behaviors, diverse body morphology, and ecological significance make them an intriguing subject for scientific studies (Sumner, Law, & Cini, 2018).

Despite extensive research on vespid fauna in Pakistan, taxonomic studies from northern areas, particularly from Azad Kashmir and Gilgit-Baltistan, have been relatively limited and underexplored. Among the notable studies conducted in Pakistan, Guseinleitner (2006) documented 23 species, including five new records of the subfamily Eumeninae, while Chaudhry, Chaudhry, & Khan (1966) identified eight species from Sindh and Balochistan. Guseinleitner (2007) reported 18 species, with 12 species recorded from Gilgit-Baltistan. Dvořák (2007) recorded 21 species, primarily from Baluchistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. Siddiqui et al (2015) reported 19 species from the Pothwar region of Punjab, Pakistan. Faiz et al (2016) reported 14 species in eight genera from Gilgit-Baltistan. In a landmark contribution on the vespid wasp fauna of Pakistan, Rafi et al (2017) documented a total of 105 taxa, comprising 77 species and 28 subspecies. Among these, 12 species are documented from Azad Kashmir and 24 species from Gilgit-Baltistan, respectively. Recently, Qasim et al (2018) enlisted 17 species of Vespidae from Muzaffarabad, Azad Kashmir, Pakistan. Despite these efforts, significant gaps remain in our understanding of the diversity and distribution of Vespidae across Azad Kashmir and Gilgit Baltistan. This study presents the first comprehensive and updated checklist of known species within the family Vespidae in Azad Kashmir and Gilgit-Baltistan.

MATERIAL AND METHODS

The present checklist has been compiled using available literature published from 1947-2023 on the vespid wasp fauna of Azad Kashmir and Gilgit-Baltistan. Taxonomic classification follows that of Siddiqui et al (2015), Rafi et al (2017), and Gawas et al (2020). Genera and species names are arranged in alphabetical order within each subfamily, to make easier the search for a given taxon.

DISCUSSIONS

A total of 39 species of vespid wasp, belonging to 12 genera in three subfamilies are known to vast areas of Azad Kashmir and Gilgit Baltistan. These subfamilies include Eumininae, Polistinae and Vespinae. Among these, Eumininae is the most diverse with 10 genera and 17 species, followed by Polistinae with three genera and 12 species, while Vespinae is the least diverse with three genera and nine species. The most species-rich genera are Polistes (nine), Vespa (five), Vespula (four), Delta (three), Euodynerus (three), Antodynerus (two), Eumenes (two), Symmorphus (two), and Ropalidia (two), among others. The present findings highlight that Azad Kashmir and Gilgit Baltistan harbour a diverse fauna of vespid wasps. These results underscore the importance of further research to explore the potential discovery of new species, as well as new records for the country or new to these regions. Such investigations would contribute significantly to our understanding of the biodiversity and ecological dynamics of these regions so it is hoped that this compilation will serve as a valuable resource for future discovery and conservation efforts pertaining to wasps in Pakistan.
